

Hi, I'm Zach, I am a sophomore here at the University of Maryland studying finance, and I am interested in pursuing a career as a financial analyst. Based on my interest in finance, this past summer I interned with Chegg which was a great experience. On campus, I am involved with the College Park Scholars Public Leadership program, which gives me great exposure to learning how to effectively work in teams and create meaningful presentations. Post-graduation, I would like to join a top company in the finance industry working on either corporate strategy or financial planning. Based on that goal, I would love to spend my summer interning at Goldman Sachs working on financial modeling and research. I think it would be an amazing place to work and help me gain valuable experience in the financial industry.
